SUBSTITUTES FOR COAL

Peat Furnishes the Greatest Possibilities.

Cheap Fuel Obtained by Scientific Processes-State Department Interested in Problem-Foreign Consuls to Report on Subject Abroad.

There is a general revival of interest in this country in the possibility of the protion of new composites and the adaptation of machinery to apply more direct the aloritic power of oils and gases now used chiefly for illuminating purposes. Half a cutury age the American people thought con prices were exorbitant, and began to around for a substitute, says the Transcript. NEW YORK FASHION LETTER

Distinguished Features of the New Home Gown-The Autumn Shirt Waist.

New York, Oct. 5.- With a touch of fros n the air and the first fires of autumn hedding their warmth through the house the house gown becomes a subject of in mediate consideration. There are several distinguishing features of the house gown of 1992 and all are combined in a most bewitching ensemble. For one thing the shoulders are very broad, the Gibson effect being employed to gain this attribute of fashion. There is, however, an improvement upon the Gibson shoulder effect of the summer, for instead of the single box plait there are bese are the continuation of myriad row of tiny tucks which have their beginning of the tures which have their beginning at the opening of the gown.

Only the softest most delicate fabrics are used for these house costumes. Silk crene de Chine, satin liberty, India silk, silk challies and cashmeres lend themselves beautifully to the modes employed and their delicate colorings afford effective combinations.

Invariably the trimming is profuse.
Frills at lace, ruffes of chiffon, flounces of embroidered silks and appliques without end adorn these gowns in bewildering loveliness. Many of the expensive designs a light weight silks are interwoven with ota satin.
